From the office of Joseph F. Unger, Jr., D.C., F.I.C.S.,

I am happy to announce the passing of ownership of Atrium Health Services to Drs. Hyacinth McGuire and Colt Wilbanks as of October 1, 2021. Both doctors are thoroughly familiar with all phases of treatment and day to day operations and are most capable in all matters.

Since its inception in 1984, all doctors at Atrium Health Services have always trained together and shared pertinent information about new techniques and individual successes and failures with patients. Currently the doctors on staff include Dr. Patrick Bronder, Dr. Hyacinth McGuire, Dr. Bryson (Colt) Wilbanks, Dr. Joshua Waschak and myself. I have complete faith in the talents and abilities of all of these fine doctors and remain indefinitely as a consulting resource for any as needed. It is our collective goal to provide the same superior services that you have come to expect.

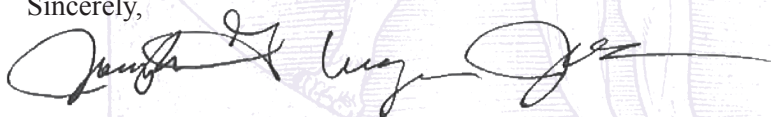

After 4 ½ years of premedical studies with a dual major in zoology and psychology as well as minors in sociology and chemistry I engaged in self-study of healing traditions and a year later entered chiropractic college. Another 4 ½ years of study completed the curriculum at Logan College of Chiropractic in December 1978.

Early 1979 I began private practice and teaching for my mentor, Dr. Major Bertrand De Jarnette as well as instructing at the Missouri College of Naturopathic Medicine. Over these years I have also conducted numerous research studies and presented and published these findings worldwide. I have had the great fortune to teach across the country, Canada, Brazil, England, Japan and Australia. My personal investigations in conjunction with the teachings of Dr. De Jarnette resulted in the most recent book publication, Brain Matters: The Missing Link, a 17-year project.

In January 1984 I became an instructor at Logan University and a few months later opened Atrium Health Services. Now, having just turned 70 years of age, I find myself drawn to increased teaching and research projects to inform and inspire future generations of doctors.

While currently my availability has remained unchanged, it is likely to begin to reduce as research and instructional projects become available. I am totally confident that the Atrium team will carry on providing a seamless transition in all office operations and services.

Sincerely,

Joseph F Unger Jr. DC
